CITY WILL DELAY ITS SEWER PLANS

Mass Meeting Decides to Watch Verdugo Canyon Plant

HAHN WILL FIGHT

Everybody Speaks Out Mainly Against the Installation

One hundred fifty people, mainly from the south and southwest side of the city, in mass meeting with the city council last night, told the city council where it stood relative to the establishment of an activated sludge sewer system on San Fernando road. The council told the mass meeting assembled citizens where it stood. Everybody expressed opinions. Those that had no opinions joined in with the opposition to the sewer plan and sewer farm idea. One gentleman, from the outside world entertained the meeting with a realator's description of his property, ending with "ah-ha!" It became a catchword of the meeting and aided the joy.

It developed that Assistant Engineer Gowdy of the state board of health had expressed contrary views on the system and the site. One to the city council approving the plan and site, and a second to former City Attorney Evans apparently knocking the whole scheme. The former had been received in writing by the council and city manager. The latter had been reported by an attorney for Mr. Hahn after an hour's talk with Mr. Gowdy.

During the process of events Mr. Hahn issued a defy to the council. He declared he would fight any project to put a sewer farm in the city. He called for a vote of the meeting against any plan to put any kind of a sewer disposal plant within the city limits or the discussion thereof. It would hurt real estate values, he insisted.

Rumors of such things to come anywhere in the city he thought woud keep buyers guessing where not to buy and the whole situation would be effected. Mr. Guthrie, who had taken a prominent part in the protest wanted a resolution that all discussion of seweage be stopped for the present.

Mattison B. Jones brought the sense of the meeting to a crux when he offered a resolution that no steps be taken toward putting in a sewage system until the plant in Verdugo canyon, to be operating in 60 days, which is an activated sludge system, be demonstrated.

Mrs. Jones rose and declared that the men had been doing all the talking and it was hard on the women. She found it would take a year and a half to put a bond issue through anyway, and she wanted to know why all the hurry. There was plenty of time to decide.

MR. INCOME TAX IS DUE HERE IN FEBRUARY

Deputy Collector Is Coming to Assist Payment

L. G. Cottrell, deputy collector of the United States treasury department will be in Glendale for five days from February 20 to 25 to receive income tax returns for the year 1921 and to assist in the preparation of the returns. In a communication from Mr. Cottrell, he states that it will facilitate matters if all taxpayers have their returns filled out ready to be checked and acknowledged but that he will be glad to assist anyone who has trouble in making out the returns and will interpret any part of the regulations not thoroughly understood. The only request that Mr. Cottrell makes is that the taxpayers come as early as possible and bring with them forms received by mail.

Following is information regarding the income tax in a nut shell: Who must pay his tax? All single persons who had net incomes of $1000 or more, or gross income of $5,000 or more. Married couples who had net income of $2000 or gross income of $5000 or more.

March 15, 1922 is final date for filing returns and making first payments. This payment is to be made to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the person lives, or has his principal place of business.

Full directions for making out returns on Form 1040A and Form 1040; also the law and regulations.

The tax is four per cent normal tax on taxable income up to $4000 in excess of exemption. Eight per cent normal tax on balance of taxable income. Surtax from 1 per cent to 65 per cent on net incomes over $5000 for the year 1921.

Woman Who Knows All About Cooties Found by Dr. Frank Crane

Here is something startling!

A woman who knows all about cooties. Perhaps the soldiers thought they knew all about them but Dr. Frank Crane finds a woman who knows more about them than the soldiers ever dreamed.

And this woman says that the bite of the cootie is not harmless but irritating. They live on human blood alone. This, probably, is not news. She says they are not active. There are many who will doubt her word.

James W. Foley in "The Listening Post" tonight says something about telephones and gas and electric light. Without them he sees a hunter out in the woods having to build a wood fire, light his pipe with a coal and carry water from the brook.

In the comments on the news of the day statistics are given that show that in California every 5.19 persons have an automobile. In proportion to population, California has the greatest number of automobiles of any state in the United States.

GLENDALE POSTOFFICE ATTACKED

Thieves Found at Rear Office Door Are Frustrated

PATROLMAN SHOOTS

Fugitives Make Their Escape in Early Morning Darkness

Police and postoffice officials believe that an attempt was made to rob the Glendale postoffice early today and that the quick action of Patrolman Anthony prevented the plan being carried out.

At 9 o'clock last night a postoffice clerk telephoned to the police department that a man had tried the rear door of the office and that when he was asked what he wanted there, he answered that he was a night watchman. The clerk said the man was careful that no one working in the office saw him. Patrolman Nunn was dispatched to investigate, and after searching the neighborhood, reported he could find no one.

When Patrolman Anthony passed the postoffice at 2 a. m. he remembered the report of the man trying to open the rear door. He passed to the rear of the office and found two men at the rear door. He called to them and they started to run. When Patrolman Anthony told them to halt one man drew a revolver from his pocket. Anthony fired three shots at the fleeing men and pursued them for several blocks, but they escaped. Anthony was assisted in the pursuit by Patrolmen Herbert and Stiles of the Glendale Merchants' Patrol and Fire Dispatch company.

The fact that the clerks in the Glendale postoffice have all been armed with automatic rifles and revolvers was apparently overlooked when the alleged bandit attempted to enter the office the first time. It is the belief of the police that the men attempted to rob the office early in the evening and when it was learned the clerks were still on duty they waited until the office was closed, and only the presence of Patrolman Anthony prevented the second attempt from being a success.

DETECTIVES DO GOOD WORK.

Detective Sergeants Delgardo and Herda of the Glendale police department completed an excellent piece of work on Tuesday when they recovered a gold watch and chain that was stolen from the home of J. H. Heinmiller, 1016 East Lomita on the night of January 14. The watch and chain was found in a Los Angeles pawn shop by the two detectives and returned to Mrs. Heinmiller. They also recovered two strings of pearls that were pawned at the same time as the watch and by the same man. So far the police have been unable to locate the owners of the pearls.

ROTARIANS ARE ENTERTAINED BY MINSTRELS

Bill Howe Springs Surprise at Rotary Luncheon

With Busby's Minstrels as surprise entertainers, the Glendale Rotary club held one of the most successful of its luncheons at noon today at the chamber of commerce auditorium.

Bill Howe of the Glendale theatre furnished the surprise, by bringing in the minstrels, who were dressed in picturesque garb and make-up. Bill led the entertainers.

Following the show the visitors present were introduced, including Al Sears, Hugh Chaffee, of Pasadena, Harry Girard and Henry James. Girard and James doubled in a duet.

Roy Kent acted as chairman in the absence of C. C. Cooper, president, and speeches were in order. Ed Hewett, who recently returned from Honolulu, told of his trip, and Harry James of the Church Film company did a monologue.

Roy Kent presented a neat charity box to the organization, after he had told of the work of the boys' work committee, reporting the raising of $1600 for the boy scout work.

NEW TRADE UNION MAY BE STRONGER THAN A. F. OF L.

Formation Is in Steady Progress According to Officials

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—Formation of miners and railroaders into a "defensive alliance" drew nearer here today.

Officials of the sixteen standard unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, were consulted by D. W. Helt, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Signal Men. Helt was one of the first to come out in favor of a conference between rail workers and miners as suggested by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. If put through the organization would exceed the A. F. & L. in strength.

Lewis, in a statement issued at Indianapolis asked that rail unions and miners "unreservedly" pool their interests to fight wage cuts of carriers and mine operators.

PLENARY SESSION WILL END WEEK FEB. 4

Routine of Signing of Treaties Scheduled for Monday

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The final plenary session of the Washington conference is planned for Saturday. Following that, on Monday, with solemn ceremony at the state department, the conference delegates will attach their signatures to the various treaties arising from the parley—treaties to bring peace in the Far East and to lay the ground work for general world peace.

With adoption of the naval, poison gas and submarine treaties and happy settlement of the Shantung issue, the conferees have also practically concluded the Far Eastern treaties.

There will be two of these, it was announced today. One will comprise the intricate subject of Chinese customs duties; the other, the various agreements affecting China such as removal of the foreign troops, foreign postoffices, solemn and broader reaffirmation of the open door policy and more.

The two treaties are in such shape that another plenary session is in sight for the week-end or early next week.

The Far Eastern conference has encountered in its latest meetings a new difficulty over passing the resolution prohibiting shipment of arms into China. Italy this time is the obstructing party. She has done some business in arms with China and 'wants to do more," according to one of those present in the long discussion yesterday afternoon. The culmination of that debate was postponement of the arms question. Today there appeared some doubt whether this prohibition could be put through in an effective fashion.

STOKES TESTIFIES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire sportsman, told of violent altercations between himself and his wife as to whether they would have children. Stokes gave this information in answer to charges made in the suit of Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes that he had forced his wife to sign away her dower rights prior to their recent divorce.

Stokes testified that so violent were the arguments at times that he, on a number of occasions, had pushed his wife aside and rushed out of the room. He denied, however, that he ever used force or struck his wife.

Stokes declared in answer to a question regarding other men staying in his apartment that on many occasions men friends stayed, but it was on condition that no women be taken into the home. He denied ever permitting a man to remain in his apartment during his absence from the city.

TRADE UNION CONFERENCE

CLEVELAND, Feb. 2.—Chiefs of the "big four" brotherhoods will meet here Monday or Tuesday to decide definitely on the proposal, of miners urging a joint conference between the two powerful labor groups to promulgate plans for fighting wage slashes.

BROADWAY SCORES AT TRACK MEET

Colorado School Comes Second and Central Takes Third

TOP SCORE IS 24½

Cerritos Crippled by the Absence of Charles Steelman

Highly successful was the first day of the long anticipated interschool track tournament at Intermediate Wednesday, with Broadway first in honors, with a score of 24½. Colorado had a credit of 20 points, Central 19, Cerritos 16, Colorado 15½, and Pacific 12.

Cerritos was crippled because of the absence of its star, Charley Steelman, who is ill. It was strenuous work for Director Albert Blanford and his associates because of the crowd of spectators and the wild excitement of the children, which interfered somewhat with the events. Mr. Blanford, who was about all in at the close of the day, declared some different arrangements would be made whereby spectators would be limited to the grammar schools competing.

Among the stars of the day were Iland Fansett (Columbus) who won running broad jump and 75-yard dash; Louis Copp (Cerritos) who won 50-yard dash and volley serve for accuracy, Ira Johnson (Bdw.) who made 5 points; Howard Sawyer (Pac.) 5 points; Gilbert Germain (Col.) 5 points; Clarence Cununingham (Cen.) 5 points; Marjorie Beaman (Colo) 5 points; Orissa Edmonds (Bdw.) 5 points; Rose Parker (Bdw.) 5 points.

Following is the score in detail:

WAR MOTHERS TO HELP THEIR SONS' BUDDIES

World War Veterans to Be Aided by Lowe Chapter

Mr. World War Veteran, are you out of work?

If you are perhaps this patriotic organization can be of service to you. A number of the mothers of World War veterans have banded themselves together and have organized the Glendale chapter of the Lester Myers American War Mothers. The purpose of this organization is to care for the needs of war veterans and their families who happen to be located in and around Glendale and the San Fernando valley. The president of this organization is Mrs. J. B. Sherwood of 357 West Broadway, while Mrs. J. M. Crowlin of 346 Hawthorne street is secretary of the committee of soldiers' relief.

The object of this organization is two-fold. The first is to secure employment for unemployed World War veterans. The second is to assist financially and otherwise, families of World War veterans that are deserving and that are badly in need of assistance.

'We do not want to see any of these World War veterans or their families suffer," said one of the "little mothers" this morning. "We are not in a position to extend a great deal of financial assistance, but we want to help where we can. We will do as much as we can toward filling the needs of any who may apply for assistance. The names of those we are assisting will be kept a secret so that no one else will know. But we don't want to see any of our noble boys or their families suffer. They have done their bit for us and now we are trying to do our little share to pay them back."

Employers in Glendale are asked to co-operate with this organization of war mothers. The ladies cannot create the positions, but if the employers when in need of assistance will get in touch with any of these mothers they will do what they can to see that these are filled by good men.

If you want work or have positions to be filled call Glendale 1173-J or 1324-J.

SHRINERS GLEEFUL AT JOY'S ALTAR

Stag Was Suggestive of Three-Ringed Circus Program

NEALE RINGMASTER

Three Hundred Nobles Gather in Temple for Old Time Joy Hours

The stag party of the Glendale Shrine club, held in the banquet hall of the chamber of commerce building Wednesday night, was a joy-fest. It was suggestive of a three-ring circus with something doing all the time and the noble president, C. E. Neale, acting as ringmaster, cracking the whip with fines, which were cheerfully paid by the merry-makers, to swell the charity fund.

It was probably the largest stag affair ever given in Glendale, about 300 being present, including guests from Los Angeles, Pasadena and surrounding towns.

By way of preliminary the Al Malaikah band of 30 pieces paraded Brand boulevard.

The first thing to be observed upon entering the auditorium was the notice, conspicuously placarded above the president's chair, "Make it short and snappy," and this was the motto of the evening, with a few privileged variations licensed by President Neale.

At 8:40 the party was called to order by President Neale and the band played a selection which was enthusiastically applauded. By way of setting the pace and beginning as he intended to hold out, President Neale announced that an assessment of 25 cents each would be levied against all who had come without fezes; also an

EXHIBIT MOTOR BUS IN CITY TOUR

Representatives of Manufacturers Propose Unit Show Car

City officials, factory and sales agency representatives and newspapermen made a trip through the streets of Glendale Wednesday afternoon in one of the latest type motor busses perfected. It is the Fageol bus, manufactured in San Francisco, brought to Glendale as a demonstrator, and is being considered as a possibility for the fleet of busses to be used in the event that Glendale decides to operate a municipal bus line between this city and Los Angeles.

This bus was brought to Glendale at the suggestion of C. D. Gulick, traffic expert, who has been engaged as consulting engineer for the municipal bus project. Many of the ideas embodied in the Fageol chassis and body were suggested by Mr. Gulick and have been found to fill the need of the motor transportation business. The type demonstrated in Glendale on Wednesday is a six-seated body, each seat accommodating four passengers, with the exception of the driver's seat, which has a capacity of three people. The danger of the bus turning turtle is diminished by the fact that the body is only 17 inches from the ground and has a larger wheel base. The wheels of the bus are larger than standard size, being 68 inches, as against the standard size, 58 inches. The extra size of the tread eliminates the danger of the bus turning over in the event of a puncture while in motion. The extra large wheel base practically eliminates the danger of the bus skidding even on the slipperiest road.

The motor is manufactured by the Hall-Scott company of San Francisco. Colonel E. J. Hall of this company is the original designer of the Liberty motor and was in charge of the manufacture of airplane motors for use in France during the World War. The bus equipped with this engine, which develops 62 horse power, can attain a speed of 50 miles per hour and can be stopped within a few feet with practically no jarring or grinding of brakes. The reason for this easy stopping is the fact that the new type bus is equipped with the same size brakes that are used on a three and one-half ton truck. The bus has a capacity of one and one-half tons.

The party traversed practically all of the principal streets of the city and then drove to the outskirts of Glendale and demonstrated the ease with which it could travel over rough roads. Ruts and holes were passed over with the same ease that the smooth roads were traveled. Altogether the bus made a very favorable impression on the city officials and it was indicated that it would be considered as a possibility when the time comes to make a selection of the type machine to be used on the municipal bus line.

The Barton Bedtime Stories

DR. MUSKRAT'S LITTLE JOKE

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

"The Big Rain we got our tatils in?" gasped Ripple Beaver and the Widow Squirrel. For that's what Dr. Muskrat had just spoken of in the most careless way, while they were gossiping down by Chips's Pond. Chips wagged a knowing head, for he smelled one of those marvellous muskrat tales the woodfolks were always quoting. But the red dog (who belonged to Louis Thomson) barked, "How about mine? Didn't I always have one?"

"You weren't in this at all, Pal," Dr. Muskrat put him aside by a wave of his paw. "You were aboard the boat with the men-folk—at least your great-grandfather, a very, very long ways back, was. Furnishing fodder, I suspect, for the little dears you have on your mind right now."

"Aw-yah!" yapped Pal, taking down the foot that had been scratching a tickly flea behind his ear. "I know what you mean. You mean the flood, when every one was drowned except the creatures Mr. Noah took aboard the ark—and, I s'pose, the fishes."

"That's what folks do say," chuckled the doctor, very much pleased that he didn't have to explain the point of his own joke—which always spoils it. "But folks are wrong. There were quite a few of us who didn't get aboard. And we didn't drown, either."

"There were the whales, of course," he went on, settling himself comfortably. "They say the first old fluke-slasher hove to as soon as the water got deep enough to float him up alongside the boat, and roared for Mr. Noah to throw out the gang-plank. But Mr. Noah yelled back that they had no room for fish. Of course, the whale took that for an insult. There's no knowing what he'd have done if one of Mr. Noah's boys hadn't sung out that they'd give him a tow if he wanted it. He was uncoiling a rope to throw over him, when the whale kind of guessed that in case the sail slit or the engine broke down he'd be doing the towing. So off he flounced."

"And that was the last of him?" said the Widow Squirrel.

"Not by many a puddleful," said the paddle-paw.

"But what about us?" demanded Ripple Beaver. "You're forgetting——"

"No, I'm not. We were fast asleep in a tree trunk, like Tad Coon. 'Cause in those days we didn't like the rain. And we never woke up when the whistle blew to call the rest of them. I still think that was a very lucky thing."

NEXT STORY: HOW SOME FOLKS GOT ABOARD THE ARK.

"I met Barrie," said an editor, "at a dinner party in London. "What a big head he's got, to be sure. 'Sir James,' I said, nervously toying with the stem of my wine glass, 'I suppose, Sir James, that some of your plays do better than others? They are all successes, I imagine?' Barrie leaned his big head on its little thin neck, toward me. His saucer-like eyes twinkled. 'No,' he said. 'some Peter out and some Pan out.'"

MAXWELL AGENCY OPENS SATURDAY

The formal opening of the new Glendale Maxwell agency, 246 South Brand boulevard, will be held Saturday. The proprietors of this stablishment are Frederick W. Proctor, of Pasadena, and Lyman D. Clark, who for several years has been a field representative for the Union Motors company. At that time a full line of demonstrators will be on the floor for inspection by prospective buyers, from Glendale and others.

D. R. Titus, a Maxwell specialty man of New Castle, Ind., has been engaged by the firm and will hereafter take efficient care of the Maxwell cars in the Glendale district. Mr. Titus knows the Maxwell from bumper to bumper, can locate car trouble in a jiffy, and can repair it in about the same length of time.

In addition to handling the Maxwell car this firm will keep constantly on hand a full line of Maxwell parts, and will also handle accessories.

CITY WILL DELAY ITS SEWER PLANS

es was sharp criticism of the supposed action in the city council toward selecting a site and toward forwarding an activated sludge system.

It was declared that the city council had tried to "slip something over on the citizens." There had been too much secrecy.

The councilmen in turn rose and protested.

Sam Davis dispassionately told how he and Councilman Kimlin had happened to find the site, lower than any other part of the city. They had not stopped to find out who would have been affected. They had later secured Mr. Gowdy's approval of the site.

"You won't have to recall me," he said, "I am willing to quit when ten reputable citizens come to me and tell me I have made a failure of my work in the couuncil."

During his speech some one in the audience had made sarcastic interjections. These brought Mayor Robinson to his feet in battle fire.

"There's one thing I can get in this meeting," he said, "and that is order. No more of that."

There was no more.

Toward the end of the meeting it developed that Councilman Lapham and Councilman Stephenson had been the minority opposition to the proposed system. Stephenson explained that the council could never have put a bond issue over for the sewer if it wanted to and could not if it would. He had appointed the sewer committee himself. The citizens had never interested themselves in the reports of the committee, read in open meeting at the city hall.

Mr. Lapham told of the Verdugo canyon plant and advised delay until it demonstrated itself. This became the keynote when Mr. Jones brought the meeting to a close with his resolution.

The meeting opened with a general talk by A. H. Koebig, distinguished engineer from Los Angeles, who had taken a leading part in the Burbank solution. He described various methods of sewage disposal. He said the system proposed was not an experiment.

Mr. Evans then got the floor and read the report secured by Mr. Hahn's attorney in an interview with Mr. Gowdy. The city council asked for a copy to be published generally as more light on the problem. Mr. Evans promised to have copies made.

Mattison Jones then began the interrogation of the engineer. Many questions he refused to answer, explaining that he was not in the employ of the city.

Lapham and Stephenson then broke in the discussion with their minority report. Mr. Jones suggested the idea of the council having attempted to slip something over. He wanted to know if the activated system was an experiment.

Dr. Russell asked if the interview with Mr. Gowdy as presented by Mr. Evans had been taken in shorthand. Find it was not, she questioned the value of it coming through a hostile source.

Mr. Jones wanted to find out all the council had done and knew.

It was discovered that the sewage disposal plant of Burbank was at the Glendale line.

Everybody declared they did not want it within five miles of their real estate holdings, on suggestion of Councilman Lapham.

B. G. Woodbury discussed septic tanks and their advantage.

Councilman Stephenson declared Mr. Koebig had never known the site selected. He had not recommended any site.

Mr. Williams rose to favor an outfall system.

Mr. Guthrie moved that there be no more publicity on the sewer. This was seconded by Mr. Newby. The question was called but Mr. Stephenson insisted the council was in session and it could not be done. He then spoke in defense of the council and opened more discussion.

Mr. Hahn issued his defy.

"We are going to fight you," he said. "And we are going to hire the best attorneys to do it. It won't go in on that site if we can prevent it."

Then Sam Davis got the floor for a long speech roasting the critics of the council.

Mrs. Botsford told of hearing statements by Engineer Gowdy similar to that of the Evans statement.

J. R. Gray also spoke.

Dr. Russell indicated Glendale people were strong on wishbone and short on contributions. They had missed chances to make profitable investments in their own city.

After Mr. Olmstead was heard, Mr. Jones brought the meeting to an end, the council having adjourned, the mass meeting organized with Mayor Robinson in the chair and the resolution carried. The city will await on the Canyon system.

THURSDAY CLUB HEARS OF SEWERS

The regular open forum meeting of the Thursday Afternoon club was held Wednesday afternoon in the auditorium of the branch library, corner Los Feliz road and Brand boulevard. A business meeting was held at 2 o'clock and at 3 the regular program took place. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. E. V. Bacon. Dr. Jessie Russell introduced the speaker of the afternoon, City Manager William H. Reeves. In introducing him, Dr. Russell made it known that he would tell some of the things one wanted to know, some of the things one did not want to know, and some of the things one did not know, which proved to be true before he had finished his interesting address.

The main topics were the proposed sewer system and the increased Pacific Electric rates. The regional planning conference held at Pasadena January 31 was also brought to light and discussed. He stated the main reason for this planning conference was to bring the communities together to discuss their problems and enable them to help one another. As everyone knows, Glendale is trying to get a sewer system. The city is growing so fast that it is compelled to have one. Mr. Reeves urged everyone to go to the mass meeting to be held for discussion of this question at the high school Wednesday night.

Dr. Russell and Mr. Reeves attended the planning conference and gave some very interesting facts about it. Secretary D. Gordon Whitnall spoke at the conference in favor of Glendale and urged that the two most important things before this city today were the problems of sewage and transportation. Mr. Mulholland, the man who built the Los Angeles aqueduct, gave a most interesting talk straight from the shoulder. He particularly spoke of the sewer problem in Glendale and Burbank, and gave a solution of the problem as finding the largest tract of land available without the expense of pumping it and placing septic tanks there, treating the sewage in the most modern and improved methods so there would be no odor. In doing this, it could be made so no one would know what this property was used for. It would appear like a park and there would be nothing whatever objectionable to the site. One may not realize it, but there is a septic tank in the middle of the golf links at Griffith park. Dr. Pomeroy, county health officer, spoke on contagious diseases, and gave a most interesting talk.

Another speaker at this planning conference was George A. Damon, electrical engineer from Pasadena. He argued that the auto busses could carry passengers to and from Los Angeles a great deal cheaper than the Pacific Electric can. Mr. Reeves then asked why the state railroad commission would not grant these permits to operate busses, saying that the reason is because they want a monopoly on transportation. The Pacific Electric states it charges so much per mile. Then why is it that going to Hollywood, a distance of 8½ miles, the fare is 10 cents, and to Glendale, a distance of 7.42 miles, we must pay 23 cents. Yes, it is charged according to the zone system and it is absolutely fair, they say, but it is not. The only reason we are charged this higher rate is because we are outside the corporate city of Los Angeles. It was stated that San Pedro, Long Beach and Glendale were the best paying lines of the Pacific Electric. Must we sit still and take it, or fight? According to Mr. Reeves, we will fight.

Dr. Russell then spoke and hit a few more of the high lights of the conference at Pasadena, stating it was presumed to be the first one of its type in the United States. The telephone rates were then discussed, and the question asked "Why should we pay a 50 per cent increase without getting at least a 50 per cent increase in service?" Dr. Russell also spoke of the Pacific Electric rates and the telephone rates and gave some interesting statistics.

Questions were then asked Mr. Reeves and he very ably answered them. Such questions as "Is there any way to eliminate the railroad commission?" "Who elected the railroad commission?" "Couldn't we get along without the railroad commission?" and many others. It was stated that the railroad commission actually admitted that "telephone service in Los Angeles was rotten."

It was announced that an employment bureau had been organized, with Mrs. George U. Moyse in charge of registration. Mrs. Moyse will be in the club rooms of the Glendale Business and Professional Women's club, 209½ South Brand boulevard, from 12 to 1 p. m.

After this very interesting program the meeting adjourned.

HERBERT HEYES KNOWS STAGE

It is no secret in the inner circles of filmdom that Shirley Mason, who opens in the Fox production, "Ever Since Eve," at the Glendale theatre today, places greater dependence on her leading man than do most women stars of the screen. In this play she has one of the best.

Herbert Heyes spent twelve years on the speaking stage, much of his time as leading man and stage director. He appeared as the star in "Truxton King," "The Man on the Box" and in the road company of "Girl of the Golden West."

Mr. Heyes is a man of commanding figure, being six feet one and one-half inches in height and weighing about 190 pounds.

K. OF C. DONATES TO BOY SCOUTS

At the regular meeting of Knights of Columbus, held Wednesday evening, Deputy Grand Knight J. W. Andree presided in the absence of Grand Knight L. F. Wright, who is confined to his home by illness.

The chief business transacted was a vote to donate $100 to the boy scout council to carry on the program of the coming year.

Ladies' Societies Meet—The Ladies' Aid society and Missionary societies of the First Methodist church are meeting today at the church. The aid society meets in the morning and in the afternoon the missionary program is given.

Truths in Epigram

He is no wise man that will quit a certainty for an uncertainty. —Johnson (1709-1784).

With man, most of his misfortunes are occasioned by man. —Pliny (23-79 A. D.).

There is no repose for the mind except in the absolute; for feeling, except in the infinite; for the soul, except in the divine.—Amiel (1821-1881).

WEATHER COMPARISONS

The gas may have been low. True enough. And it is no happy thing when the gas is low in cold weather, if you depend upon gas for heat. Neither is it pleasant when the gas is low at the time for cooking, or if it goes out at the time the cooking is well along. No, it is not pleasant. It is not pleasant, either for the consumer or for the gas company.

And the rain may have been severe, to be sure. Travel was not easy. Roads were uncertain. Damage was done. There were little floods and big ones perhaps. And the lights flickered and went low for a considerable time. Surely, all is sometimes vanity and vexation of spirit.

Yet if we read the reports of the storms on the Atlantic seaboard, if we know what it means when there is two feet of snow on the level, when train service is abandoned, roads altogether blockaded, wires down, coal supplies low and the temperature below zero, we realize that our discomforts are only little ones after all. We may shiver, but we will not freeze. There are no drifts to be cut through with great plows. We are not "snowed in." Comparatively, there is still balm in Gilead.

And however it may be, we will have to take it as it comes. As Jim Riley said, when the Lord sends rain, rain is our choice, or ought to be. At any rate it is what we will get. Taking it on the whole over a period of years, we have a lot of joy and comfort. If it goes wrong once in a while, we shall the more enjoy by contrast. Sometimes, we trust, there may be gas enough for all.

SHACKLETON

The world admires those interpid spirits that have braved danger and hardship that we might have knowledge of the waste and unknown places. Among them was Shackleton, whose sudden death is reported while he was an another adventure of discovery and research. He was yet a comparatively young man and his name stands high among those who have brought us knowledge. He was stricken while in the heat and enthusiasm of the work he had chosen and died within a few minutes from the first severe seizure of illness. Doubtless he would have chosen to go in that way, had he had a choice. His death is a distinct loss to the world of science and discovery. America and England have given the world two of its greatest Arctic explorers and each nation has highly honored the brave spirit of adventure and quest for knowledge. And America will join with England in mourning for the loss of this courageous man who has deserved so well of his country and the world.

CONGRATULATIONS

The realty board of Los Angeles two years ago began the custom of presenting a gold watch suitably inscribed or engraved to the citizen to be determined by a committee of the realty board, the chamber of commerce, the Clearing House association and other bodies, who has been the most useful citizen of the city of Los Angeles in the preceding year. It is a custom that is a bit unusual, and one wise to continue. This year the distinction fell to a newspaper publisher, Harry Chandler of the Los Angeles Times, whose activities are many, along social, educational, industrial, civic and newspaper lines.

In all of these he has been the big hearted man, with courage and vision, and the distinction of his selection is well deserved. His fellow publishers will join in congratulations, both to the recipient of the merited honor and to the committee for its wise selection.

THE MOTOR AND MODERNITY

The automobile has brought many changes. It has given pleasure to its millions. It has annihilated distance, in a way. To start on a hundred mile drive in midafternoon and take dinner at the destination is not at all extraordinary—only an incident of the day's work or pleasure, as the case may be. Cities are now neighbors of one another. The run of fifty miles between one and another is the trip of a brief hour and a half or two hours.

Business has been speeded up. Trucks have been made competitors of railroad systems for the hauling of freight, as stage lines are competitors of passenger trains. Streets are no longer places for easy pedestrianism. There is an unceasing flow of motor traffic. And in congested areas the deaths number one a day in cities such as our neighbor city of Los Angeles, to say nothing of the hundreds who are maimed and crippled.

And then there is the auto bandit, or autopad. we might call him. He no longer walks afoot to hold up his victims. He makes his attack from a swift vehicle and his getaway in the same manner. And he is the successor of the old horse thief, for he steals motor cars with the same recklessness that the horse thief stole horses. He is a dangerous individual, assisted as he is by a vehicle that speeds quickly from place to place.

So whatever brings its blessings brings also its problems. Street traffic is a constantly increasing problem. The number of killed and maimed is alarming. And the recklessnesses and dare deviltry of the autopad is not reassuring.

The motorist can help solve the problems. He can exercise greater care and drive with more deliberation. He can secure his car so it may not be readily stolen. He can report reckless and careless drivers. He can stand for the enforcement of reasonable laws and regulations. He can obey police regulations even when traffic officers are not looking.

And the pedestrian has his responsibility. He can content himself with patience until the flow of traffic is in the direction he wishes to go. He can remember at all times that it is unwise to dispute right of way with a rapidly moving vehicle. He may vindicate his rights at the cost of his life and health.

And for the autopad, there was a law passed in frontier days that checked stage robbing. Highway robbery was made a capital offense. We are not sure but it would have a wholesome effect if the law were again invoked. Crimes in which murder is a necessary factor ought to be dealt with in the spirit in which the bandit deals with his victims. He means to show no mercy. Why should any be shown?

ROOFS AND PROFITS

Engineers planning bridges, or abutments or foundations or trusses or supports, if the planning is done carefully and wisely and the construction is not faulty or dishonest, have a 'factor of safety." They do not so construct a support that it will bear the greatest load that will be put upon it. They construct, or plan to construct, it so that it will sppport many times the greatest load that it will have to bear. This is the "factor of safety," which may be three or five or seven as the case may be. The factor of safety is your insurance when you are crossing a bridge or sitting under a roof.

It is well to withhold criticism while an inquiry into a disaster is in progress. But it is well to insist that the inquiry be thorough and vigorous and that if there is criminal responsibility, somebody be punished for such a disaster as cost over a hundred lives and the maiming of another hundred persons in the collapse of a theater roof at Washington.

We have had disasterous theater accidents before, usually from fire. The one at Washington, so far as we know, is unique. And a theater roof that will buckle and collapse because of the snow that falls even in an unusual storm, is in dire need of inquiry.

There is need always for the most careful regulation of construction in buildings that have within their walls daily hundreds if not thousands of men, women and children. The profit is greater, of course, if the construction is flimsy and cheap. And in some instances profit seems a greater thing than human life. But when the disaster comes, we realize what crimes are done in the name of and for the sake of profits. And there is a hot rage in the breasts of people, that gradually cools until the thing is forgotten. And it remains forgotten until another disaster takes its toll of innocent and trusting human life.

It is hoped the inquiry into the disaster at Washington will be mercilessly thorough to the end that an example be made if there was criminal responsibility.

Bergdoll should feel flattered at the unanimity of the demand for his presence in this land of the free. In his absence, however, the fact that George Sylvester Viereck is still on these shores, is not accorded the importance it deserves.

COOTIES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It is always interesting to meet a man who knows something.

Still more interesting to meet a woman who knows something.

We don't know much in this world of mystery and when we run across some one who does know something, and knows it accurately and through and through, it is an oasis experience.

When Huxley was lecturing in the United States he began his remarks on one occasion by saying, with his English accent, what sounded like "A man gnaws what he gnaws." He was not speaking of rats, but meant that a man knows what he knows.

The celebrated Baptist divine, Dr. P. S. Henson, used to say "I believe in a man that believes in what he believes in."

It is with pleasure that I record meeting with a woman who knows what she knows.

It is Miss Katherine Foot, a young lady of 68, and what she knows is Cooties.

That makes no difference, however, for it matters nothing what is the object of one's knowledge, the main thing is the knowledge, and a louse is as full of mystery and amaze as an elephant.

The depths of the infinitesimally small are as extensive as the heights of the infinitely large.

Tennyson said if he could understand "the flower in the crannied wall" he would know what man is and God is.

Miss Foote told me some curious facts about Cooties. She is an eminent biologist, and has devoted years, in her laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., and in France, to studying the habits of these beasties, with a view of finding out some way to kill them.

No external application or internal medicine fatal to these vermin, and not also fatal to their human host, has been found.

To get rid of them is not sufficient to remove and bake the clothing, and to wash thoroughly the body, but the body must be also shaved over its entire surface, as the eggs, which are so minute as to be invisible, are deposited on the small hairs found all over the skin surface.

Cooties live on human blood only. To take the blood of any other animal, even that of the Guinea pig which most resembles the human, kills them.

Cooties are probably as old as the human race.

One of the strange superstitions of the ignorant is that to have them is good for the health and prevents disease.

The fact is that they are known to carry disease, especially typhoid, recurrent and trench fevers.

The grown cooties are about three millimetres long, can easily be found, and as they are not active, can readily be killed. They cannot jump like fleas.

A female lays about ten eggs a day; these hatch in five days or more and immediately go to feeding; they mature in about twenty days when they breed in turn.

Their bite is harmless, though irritating; the danger of infection comes from the victim's scratching and thus inoculating himself with the faeces of the insect.

All this may be considered war correspondence, from the greatest war of the human race, with its greatest enemy, the insect race.

THE LISTENING POST

The telephone tinkles.
Or rather the bell does.
And we say "Hello!"
And somebody answers.
Possibly an old friend who wanted to ask us to dinner.

The old friend may have been in any one of a dozen places.
Or a hundred places.
Anywhere in town or in some other town.
It makes no difference.
A tangle of wires and a lot of electrical energy and a switchboard and bells bring the voice to us from wherever they may be.

* * *

So you sit in your home and you may talk with any one of a thousand or ten thousand persons.
All by the telephone system.
Which gives you an amplified voice.
Reaching all over the city.
Or the state.
Or the United States.

That's mighty convenient to be sure.
You are never so alone but you may talk with a friend over the telephone.
And you don't realize perhaps what a convenient thing it is till there is a storm.
Wires are down.
Connections broken.
And you can't order groceries.
Make a dinner engagement.
Tell the office you will be detained.

Tough luck.
Everything awry.
Because you can't do as you are accustomed to do.
Talk anywhere in the city without leaving your chair.
And then you begin to realize what a convenient and useful thing a telephone system is.
And how your affairs are upset when a single little wire leading into your home or office chances to be broken.

All of the convenience of the telephone has been hanging on a single wire or two.
And you never realized how much it meant till the wire broke.
And there's a little pipe too.
That leads to your range or furnace.
And you turn a handle and strike a match and you have a hot fire.
On the instant.

But something happens.
The flow is shut off.
No gas.
No fire.
No heat and no supper.
And you realize again what an important thing in your economy a gas connection is.
When it has gas in it.

And without it everything is awry again.
No hot water.
No bath.
No coffee or tea or things like that.
More happiness and comfort dependent on a single little pipe leading into your home.

And you wish a drink.
Turn a faucet.
Out flows a clear and cold stream.
Brought from a long distance.
A spring piped into your house.
You don't have to carry water on your head.
Or your shoulders.

Again you take it as a matter of course.
Until there is a stoppage in the flow.
No drink.
No sparkling spring any more.
More of your comfort dependent on a pipe line.
Till at last you realize what a dependent being you are.

You think you are a householder with all the majesty of ownership.
And except for your telephone and gas and electric light and water, you might be a hunter out in the woods.
Having to build his wood fire, and light his pipe with a coal and carry water from the brook and be shut away from your friends for miles and miles.

SONGS OF THE POETS

A Vagabond Song—By Bliss Carman (1861——)

There is something in the autumn that is native to my blood—
Touch of manner, hint of mood;
And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.

The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry
Of bugles going by.
And my lonely spirit thrills
To see the frosty asters like a smoke upon the hills.

There is something in October sets the gipsy blood astir;
We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls and calls each vagabond by name.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

A HOLLOW VICTORY

[New York Herald]

By a vote of 46 to 41, the senate yesterday upheld Truman H. Newberry in the fight for his seat in that body. It has been a bitter, long drawn out contest, covering more than three years. Though ending in favor of the senator, the victory is a hollow one. It can be nothing else with so many of his own party voting against him. Their opposition, to be sure, was not aimed at Senator Newberry himself, but rather was because of the complications of the whole matter, involving a great trial at law in which the verdict went against him, though afterward it was reversed.

Moreover, it has been the conviction of his political friends who opposed him in this contest in the senate that he should have resigned his seat and taken his case back to the people of his state for their verdict.

This was the contention of the New York Herald, though holding the most friendly feelings for Senator Newberry, and it still thinks he should do this very thing. The retention of his seat in the circumstance cannot be worth while.

BREAD ON THE WATERS

[Philadelphia Public Ledger]

Julia Grant, as the Princess Cantacuzene will always be known to Americans, reveals the fact that one of the Russian refugees for whom she appeals to the American public is the admiral who brought to the United States that moral support which saved us from having to encounter a European coalition at the time we were at death-grips with the southern confederacy. He is nearly ninety years old; his wife is also a refugee, "and it was only recently," said Grant's granddaughter, "that our committee was able to give them any aid." Her committee is the American central committee for Russian relief.

Enemies of Russia have attempted to disprove that Admiral Lissowsky's fleet was sent here to aid the Union and crush the designs of Napoleon III. against us, but their only proof is that there is nothing in the Russian archives to show why he was sent and that he conveyed no official statement of the czar's attitude. The answer is, first, that Louis Napoleon instantly dropped his designs against us, having no longer the least hope that England would join him; and second, that from that point England became readily more friendly to us. No flaunting of declaration of Russia's purpose was required; indeed, it would have defeated the aim of Alexander. For him to send his fleet to New York in the midst of such fearful disasters to the Union cause as Fredericksburg and while France was seeking to form a coalition for our dismemberment was a gesture that no European power could disregard.

And so Lissowsky and his wife, he ninety years old, need our help, and have not had much of it. One of Grant's old soldiers, remembering the relief that overspread our troubled camps in that dark winter when Lissowsky came, writes the Princess Cantacuzene he is "glad that little Julia Grant is doing something for the refugees of Russia" because of that relief of long ago.

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA STEWART

It's a mistake to think the knowledge we possess is not good enough for our children. Any town boasts the parents who declare: "My children shall never struggle as I have." Oh, "They shall have more advantages than ever I had," and who then proceed unwisely to educate their boys and girls into contempt for hard toil and straightened circumstances. It's a pathetic ambition, having root in mistaken tenderness.

Not that we should not crave the good things for our children. We'd be queer parents if we did not. Put let's be sure that our definition of "good things" is the right one. It might help us to clarify our thoughts a trifle did we look back over our own lives. From what did we gain life's best attributes? From patience, endurance, the conquering of hardships? From the easy days, or the hard ones? Is it right to refuse our children the same possibilities? Extra advantages that parents have had to both deny their own legitimate comforts and slave to give their children are likely not to prove advantages in the end.

We have no right to complain that children are not appreciative and thoughtful if by the training we ourselves have given, the younger ones have been taught contempt for their home circumstances and the supreme importance of their own selfish welfare. One never gathers figs from thistle plants.

We try our best to be good to our children. But the tragic thing is, we try so mistakenly. And when the harvest comes we reap it with bitter tears and place the blame where in reality it does not belong.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

California stands fourth in the list of states in the number of motor cars registered in 1921. New York leads with 754,085 motor cars, Ohio is second with 742,713, Pennsylvania is third with 689,589 and California has 674,830. There is a total of 10,449,785 motor cars in the United States, a gain of 1,517,327 over the 1920 figures. In the proportion of cars to population California leads all the states having a car for every 5.19 persons. In 1920 the ratio was 6.02. New York's ratio for 1921 is 13.77, while the ratio for the country as a whole is 10.10.

It is seen from these figures that California takes a foremost place in the matter of automobiles. Possibly our all-the-year climate, our hundreds of miles of paved boulevards and our general prosperity has something to do with it. The man who owns a motor car in California has 365 days in which to enjoy it. He has within reach the vastness of the desert, the lure of the mountains and the joy of the ocean. He can have any class of scenery he desires; he can go from sunshine into snow or from the broad expanse of the grand old Pacific to the trackless deserts. Is it any wonder then that California should have a motor car for each 5.19 persons in the state? It is not!

Those who read this column today may miss the brilliant style of Henry James. Unfortunately Mr. James is confined to his home on account of a severe cold and the task of writing these comments has been assigned to another for the time being. Mr. James has endeared himself in no uncertain terms to readers of this editorial page. He has put so much of his life into his work, so much of intelligent effort that it would be almost useless for one to attempt to imitate his style. Hitting straight from the shoulder Mr. James by his forcible manner has made friends and some enemies. He has trod on toes occasionally, trod heavily at times, but there is always the expression of the highest ideals in Mr. James' comments, always an influence for good and his return to his desk will be welcomed by his associates and his large circle of readers.

Now it is the shaving brush that is to be ostracized. In New York an investigation has shown that the dread disease, anthrax, is spread through the use of cheap shaving brushes sold by street vendors. These cheap brushes have been found to harbor virulent anthrax bacilli and an effort will be made to have state supervision over the sale of these carriers of disease.

The birth rate among native born mothers in New York city is decreasing, and Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commisioner, rises to remark that it is a sad commentary upon present-day conditions that there should be birth control discussion when native-born mothers are decreasing in the city. He predicts that if the increase is kept up the prominent families of the city will not be those whose ancestors came over in the Mayflower or the Lord Baltimore, but will be those whose parents came here in immigrant steamships.

It may come as a surprise to many persons in California to know that the department of labor has branded California as a community where child labor exists. Exploitation of children by Chinese and Hindus in the asparagus fields is cited as one example where tots are compelled to work from ten to twelve hours.

It is also set forth that violation of the child labor law is flagrant in the Imperial valley where 2500 to 3000 children under 16 years of age work in the cotton fields. Even those as young as three years are said to pick cotton.

This certainly is a fine commentary upon our boasted civilization. We comment harshly upon the utilization of child labor in the coal mines, but we must be blind if we cannot see the use of child labor that exists right under our eyes. There isn't a Sunday but we can see in the fields about this section tiny Japanese babies working in the fields of vegetables or strawberry beds with their mothers. Women and children, virtual slaves, and right under our eyes and we do nothing about it.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

I fired a man this morning. I know that he has a wife, a daughter who rolls 'em high, a small black car, and a garden in which he grows gladioli during the summer. But I fired him for all of that. He had finally worn out my patience. It got to a point where his good intentions were actually preying on my mind. Either he or I had to go, and I'm the boss.

"Did you do that trick I spoke to you about with Tom Bowles?" I asked him.

"No, sir," said he cheerily. "It's a funny thing. I've had the best intentions in the world about that trick for a week past, but somehow I just couldn't get around to it."

So then I boiled over and scalded him and chased him off the premises with a month's salary in advance and a thorough knowledge of my sentiments. He is always full of good intentions. The worst of it is that he doesn't move fast enough to catch up with 'em.

To have good intentions—and then not make good with them—is almost as bad as never having them at all. We are, for example—I mean the national WE—on the verge of bad feelings with Brazil. There is to be a centenary exposition, or something of the sort, at Rio de Janeiro in September of this year, and some time ago the United States promised to participate, and the chiefs agreed to spend a million dollars on the participation. Part of that was to go to the construction of an exhibition building which should be retained permanently as the American embassy in Rio. The rest was to cover the cost of whooping it up.

"Lovely," said Brazil," being properly gratified. "Uncle Sam is one good hombre."

But since then we haven't done anything. Our intentions are all right, you'll understand. The chances are we will spend that million dollars on the exposition. But it takes time in which to build a permanent structure, and it takes time to stir up enthusiasm, and nothing has been done yet except vaguely to indicate that we are full of good intentions—gosh all fish hooks, but we are full of good intentions. Soon it will be too late.

I'd rather do business with a man who has no good intentions at all. I know where he stands. I can't tell whether the other sort is a pussy-footer, a procrastinator, or just a plain, cowardly, low-down liar.

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

DORAN SCHOOL P. T. A. MEETING

The Doran Street Parent-Teacher association met Wednesday afternoon, the meeting being called to order by the president, Mrs. A. H. Brown. After a short business session the meeting was given over to Mrs. Frank Shaw of Los Angeles, who gave a very interesting talk on "The Story of Lige and How to Tell It to Children." Mrs. Shaw was formerly head of the Florence Crittendon home. Many interesting questions were asked and answered. There were quite a few visitors and the attendance at this meeting is the largest they have ever had.

READING CIRCLE AT THE LIBRARY

The Reading Circle met Wednesday at the public library with a fine attendance. A review was given of an article, "Mother Gets Back on the Job," written by Bess Streeter Aldrich for the February American magazine. The article was read by Mrs. H. D. Henry, and proved most interesting. There was quite a bit of discussion on the subject. Mrs. Barton had received a communication from the southern branch of the University of California in regard to reviews being sent there rather than to Washington, but the letter stated that it would be necessary to send them to Washington to the department of education. A great many present filled out the applications to take the reading review course. Mrs. Barton continued the reading of the book, "Moral Education."

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Webber of 445 Palm drive entertained the members of the Blue Bird Bridge club on Saturday evening. Besides the eight members there were a number of out-of-town guests who included Mrs. Grace Whitney of Coronado, Mrs. C. Wilson of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. C. Moore of San Diego, Mrs. Wally Peterson and small daughter, Loualta, of Seattle. These guests were all week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Webber. High score was won by Mrs. Grace Whitney and Frank Hare. A beautiful centerpiece of pink carnations and maidenhair fern was used on the dining table, and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. After an enjoyable evening of cards, the party enjoyed dancing.

CONCERT FOR HIGH STUDENTS

The pupils at the Glendale high school were fortunate in having a delightful concert given them on Wednesday morning in the auditorium. The concert was given as a courtesy of the Loomis-Schuck Music company of North Brand. Mr. Henry Souvaine was the artist and the Knabe Ampico repeated some of his numbers. A very interesting piece was entitled "The Crap Shooters," by Eastwood Lane of New York. He played several of Chopin's waltzes, and Beethoven's "Turkish March." All of these numbers were greatly appreciated by the students and teachers, and they wish to thank the Loomis-Schuck Music company for this courtesy.

Hot dog! Wednesday was the first birthday of the Glendale Merchants' Patrol and Fire Dispatch, and in honor of the event the patrolmen and chief of the organization blossomed forth last night, when they reported for duty all dolled up in their new uniforms. The regulation patrolman blue was used in the uniform, which has an open collar on the coat. The cap is blue decorated in gold braid. Some class to the patrolmen as they attend to their duties. Eh, what!

Gertrude Ross, California Composer, to Sing Here

GERTRUDE ROSS
In Recital, Friday

Gertrude Ross, whose recital will constitute the February program of the Glendale Music club, Friday evening at the high school, is known the country over as a California composer, not only of songs, but of instrumental numbers for cello and piano, and her ballet, "Legende," for orchestra, has met much favorable comment. Her songs, the best known of which is "Dawn in the Desert," are on the programs of the leading concert artists, and some of these she has accompanied, notably Mme. Schumann-Heinke, with whom the song mentioned was a great favorite. It was also in the repertoire of Julia Culp, Tillie Koenan, and has found favor with sopranos and men singers.

ACADEMY PUPILS DEMONSTRATE IN RECITAL

The students' recital Wednesday evening at the California Academy of Music on North Brand Blvd was acclaimed by those present as a most remarkable demonstration of the modern methods of musical instruction and the performance of the youngsters was a revelation to teachers and parents alike.

These pupils from the juvenile classes of Miss Elsa Breidt, instructor in pianoforte and Miss Marjorie Vorhes, violin instructro, disclosed the marvelous result obtained when a complete harmony exists between pupil and teacher, and forcibly emphasized the importance of instruction by teachers possessed of broad musical knowledge and pedagogic ability, together with the sympathetic understanding which enables them to bring out the latent musical knowledge in the child. This is most marked when the child is called upon to perform in public before an audience of adults. It is one thing for a child to make a good showing at home or alone with the teacher, but public playing is quite a different and difficult matter. And this faculty is keener in students who have the advantage of instruction in the musical institution rather than under private tutors.

Those who witnessed this musicale were simply amazed at the way these youngsters performed and the intelligent understanding with which they interpreted the various numbers assigned to them on the program. The parents were Marjorie Vorhes, violin instructor, liren but were equally well pleased and delighted with the work of the other children and expressed their satisfaction with the accomplishments of the California Academy and its able instructors.

Student recitals are thought of as tiresome affairs by most parents, but this recital proved conclusively that there is no reason why they should be so considered. There was not a dull moment during the entire evening. These embryo musicians put pep into their performance and their auditors' hearty responses proclaimed the success of their efforts to entertain.

The students on the program included Mary Jane Neel, Billy Brewer, Dorothy Levey, Billy Godfrey, Evelyn Apffel, Dorothy Godfrey, Rosanita Ruggiere, Beatrice Smith and Catherine Wood.

The bonds of matrimony don't always pay interest.

assessment of 25 cents each against all occupying front seats, because the same persons had been at the fore at the last party.

While the 18 Chanters of Al Malaikah were entertaining with two numbers, President Neale discovered in the audience Judge Bright of Chicago, and assessed him 25 cents for sneaking in and coming without his fez. In defense the judge said he had believed the boasts of Southern California about its weather, and supposed no head covering would be required.

Messrs. Jackson, George Bentley and Thos. D. Watson, applicants for membership in the Al Malaikah, were introduced and all present promised to give them their money's worth when they were initiated.

While more numbers were being played by the band, President Neale observed Noble D. Ripley Jackson holding a little parade of his own, and appointed a committee from the patrol and the Chanters to decide what fine should be assessed against him. Their verdict was $1, which was promptly paid by the postmaster.

All members of the Glendale Shrine club were then invited to stand up, and were instructed by the president to greet all brothers in the order whenever they met them, with the salutation: "Howdy Noble!"

A balloon dance by a Los Angeles artist preceded the introduction of Imperial Potentate Louis M. Cole of Los Angeles. Before he was permitted to respond the Chanters sang a song in his honor expressing fidelity and loyalty. Noble Cole congratulated the club on its great success and pronounced Glendale the cleanest city he had ever visited, declaring it could well serve as an example to Los Angeles. He mentioned the plans for building a Shrine auditorium to cost not less than $1,000,000 and seat 7,500, with a stage capable of holding 300.

Noble Jernegan of Santa Ana was then called upon, President Neale stating that he did not know whether Mr. Jernegan represented Santa Ana or the famous Judge Cox, who has been sending so many speeders to jail.

At this point the patrol was given four minutes in which to circulate blanks for subscriptions to preferred stock in the new temple. At the close of the four minutes they reported 25 blanks signed, which brought the total subscription of the club to 31 shares, or 50 per cent of the club's Al Malaikah membership.

At intervals during the remainder of the program there were songs, dances and readings by Madame Suzanne and other Los Angeles entertainers.

Noble F. W. Kellogg of the Los Angeles Express made a brief talk and was followed by the poet, James W. Foley, who was introduced by President Neale with the announcement that the motto of the evening would be modified to read simply "Make it snappy," which he knew the poet would do. Mr. Foley read several of his poems, which evoked tremendous applause, following them up with some very amusing stories, and concluding his contribution to the evening's program, by special request, with his poem "California."

Noble D. Ripley Jackson recured the floor to tell about the song written by Daddy Silverwood for the Shrine convention at San Francisco, for which Harry Girard had composed the music. The band then played the air and the audience joined in singing the words, as printed on a large banner held up for all to see.

Daddy Silverwood responded to call with a brief speech, and while he was speaking the band played, as an obligato, his famous song, "California."

Noble Pauly, president of the Pasadena Shrine club, was the next speaker, and stated that the Pasadena organization has a membership of 354 and specializes on charitable work. He is also secretary of the Al Malaikah and invited all present to attend the big Shrine ball to be held at Hotel Maryland some time in the near future.

As the program was drawing to a close, the Chanters, by request, sang "Now the Day Is Over." President Neale then announced that David Crofton had been appointed chairman of the good cheer committee, and that the club would give a dance February 15; also that 18 new members had been enrolled since the last meeting, bringing the enrollment to 158.

Light refreshments were then served, cafeteria style.

I'm Coming Back to Glendale!

Fifteen years ago I bought an abandoned vineyard on Central Avenue from L. C. Brand, and laid out Glendale Place into Patterson Avenue, Burchett Street, Pioneer Drive and other streets. I sold lots for $275 to $450 each. Now they're worth from $1,500 to $5,000.

There were big possibilities in Glendale then—but there are bigger ones today, for now it is certain that a splendid, prosperous city is in the making. Glendale must grow—will grow.

So, I'm coming back to Glendale. I've bought two fine residence tracts—"Eagle Glen Heights," out on Broadway, and "Roland Square" opposite Patterson Park, on Doran Street. The same fine, present-day values and the assurance of big future increases are in these properties, just as they were in Glendale Place.

I believe Glendale people know Glendale values, so I have arranged a PRE-OPENING SALE for their benefit both at "Eagle Glen Heights" and at "Roland Square" on Sunday, February 5. Prices and full particulars will be in Saturday's newspapers.

MUSICAL LEADERS EXPLAIN ATTITUDE ON CONTROL

Executives of Glendale and Madrigal Clubs Oppose Board

Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, president of the Glendale Music club, is anxious that there should be no misunderstanding of her attitude to the proposition made by Harry Girard at a meeting of directors of the chamber of commerce to organize a board of control which would co-ordinate and bring under one central head, all the musical organizations in the city for the purpose of financing their programs and promoting community affairs such as a community chorus and a community orchestra, a community oratorio society, and a musical festival which would advertise the city and attract many visitors.

She expressed her entire sympathy with the community chorus proposition which would bring people together to sing for the enjoyment of the moment without attempt at serious study, also the other projects mentioned by Mr. Girard, particularly the musical festival in which she was sure all the music lovers of the city capable of rendering service would join.

She showed, however, that the various musical clubs are now cooperating and all working harmoniously under the state federation of music clubs in carrying out a big program to make the United States a musical nation. "Why," she asked, "break in on this organization to form a local board which would be composed for the most part of non- musical persons, and which would rob existing musical organizations of their present independence in arranging for and putting out programs?"

The aim and purpose of Mr. Girard, she commended highly, but said she did not believe it would work out satisfactorily or that the musical organization would entertain it, though all would be ready to co-operate in a community chorus or festival.

Mrs. Charles A. Parker, director of the Madrigal club, which has already secured subscription to finance its two programs, said she did not favor the board of control idea at all. It would "swallow" as it were, organizations now independent and a serious objection would be its personel in the representation it would contain of organizations that are not devoted to music and which for that very reason could not act intelligently on matters musical. Like Mrs. Jones, she declared it could never become the foundation of an oratorio society, because such programs would call for trained singers who are willing to study, and material of that kind could be found in the church choirs of the city.

GREAT USED CAR SALE BEGINS ON FRIDAY

Packer Auto Company to Hold Three Days Event

A used car sale that promises to eclipse anything of the kind that has ever been held in Glendale will be put on by the Packer Auto company, corner of Colorado and Brand, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday of this week. Used car sales of various sizes and calibres have been held in Glendale in the past and the people are familiar with the "ordinary" sale, but in the one that will be put on by the Packer company, with prices that are "way down," and which are in fact, lower than any ever offered in Glendale for the same character of used cars, will be of sufficient value to interest every resident of this valley who is possibly in the market for a used car, and many who have not up to this time seriously considered the possibility of owning an automobile.

More than forty automobiles having a total valuation of more than $35,000 will be placed on sale tomorrow morning. The machines that will be offered at this sale will include used Studebakers, Pages, Dodges, Nashes, Cadillacs, Dorts, Buicks, Hudsons, Maxwells, Kisselcars, Chevrolets, Fords and a number of other makes, so that every prospective buyer will have a large assortment of cars to choose from.

The cars that will be offered in this sale will fit every pocketbook. Cars will be sold from $75 to $2200, this giving the fellow with a small income just as much chance of getting what he wants as does the man with the "big fat bank roll." All sorts of models will be offered, including coupes, sedans, touring cars, roadsters, etc.

Every exchanged or renewed car prepared for this sale was rebuilt with the intention of selling for scores of dollars more than the prices at which they will be offered. The Packer company spared no expense in labor or material in getting ready for this gigantic sale and it intends that this sale shall be a revolution in automobile selling. This company is prepared to "show" the people of Glendale that there can be such a thing as a real, sure-enough automobile sale in Glendale.

Another point—with every car sold in this sale the Packer company will give a $10 service book free. This book will entitle the holder to $10 worth of automobile repairing free of charge. In this way the Packer company believes it is safeguarding the buyer against any small defects that could possibly be found, due to some oversight.

The cars offered will be sold for cash or terms. Seven auto salesmen will be on the job to take care of the needs of all. Throughout the sale the show-rooms will be open until 9:30 o'clock, for the accommodation of those who cannot call during the day.

BRAND BOULEVARD HAS POTENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

So J. Harvey McCarthy, Big Subdivider Declares on Visit

In the estimation of J. Harvey McCarthy, prominent Los Angeles subdivider, Brand boulevard is destined to become one of the most important business streets in Southern California. At present prices, he says, lots on it are below their true value, despite the advances that have been recorded in recent months.

"It is my firm conviction that Brand boulevard possesses business potentialities not exceeded by any other similar thoroughfare in my knowledge," Mr. McCarthy said yesterday. "It has everything that goes into the upbuilding of a wonderfully successful business street—width, location, surroundings and a fast increasing population to draw from. It is the sort of a street that commands admiration at first sight, and from which a lasting impression is taken.

"In my opinion the present prices of Brand boulevard frontages do not represent their true value; and I say this knowing that remarkable advances have taken place. As people come to Glendale in increasing numbers—as they will—and as the tributary country fills up, Brand boulevard must assuredly be the great shopping street to which everyone will come. To my mind there are present the same expectations of future value that there were in Western avenue only two or three years ago—and it is a matter of well-known record what wonderful increases in the value of property have recently taken place there.

"I can remember, back in 1908, when the lot at the northwest corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway sold for $4000; I am informed that recently $100,000 was refused for it. That well illustrates the estimation in which Brand boulevard frontages are held by those who have the vision to look a little into the future. Broadway, too, must of necessity become an important business street, and I look to see it give even Brand boulevard a hard race for supremacy."

Mr. McCarthy is no stranger to Glendale real estate. Fifteen years ago he bought 36 acres of land on Central avenue from L. C. Brand for $600 an acre and opened up Patterson avenue, named for his wife, Miss Mary Patterson of Louisville, Ky.; Burchett street, named for her uncle, Major D. J. Burchett, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., who won fame in the Union army during the civil war; and Pioneer drive, called after the Pioneer Investment & Trust Co., of which Mr. McCarthy was president for a number of years. The lots he sold for $275 to $450 then are now being held at from $1500 to $5000, Mr. McCarthy says.

It is Mr. McCarthy's intention to open two new residential developments in different parts of Glendale on Sunday. One of them, "Eagle Glen Heights," is located on Broadway, on the slopes of the San Rafael hills; the other, "Roland Square," is opposite Patterson park on Doran street.

RARE ARTIST IS PLAYING AT THE T. D. & L.

George Olsene, Organist of Theatre Is Real Genius

GEORGE OLSENE, B. M.
T. D. and L. Organist

When on the subject of artists one is apt to limit one's vision to squares of canvas and little daubs of paint. Webster's definition of an artist is: "One who professes and practices an art in which imagination and taste preside over the execution, especially a fine art; a person skilled in one of the arts."

All this naturally directs our attention to George Olsene, the artist of rare skill who causes the big organ at the T. D. & L. theatre to speak a language all its own. So far as the average person is concerned it is impossible, but Mr. Olsene's artistic temperament and wonderful degree of skill have made it a possibility for him.

Mr. Olsene secured his musical education at the Christiana conservatory of music, Christiana, Norway, at which institution he was awarded the "B. M." degree. This was something like 15 years ago. Upon his graduation he went immediately upon the concert stage, playing on Chatauqua circuits, where he performed on the piano. From the concert stage he was finally drawn to motion pictures, this being at the time when the motion picture operators realized the value of the very best class of music when used in connection with pictures. When the managers began using the pipe organ in connection with pictures Mr. Olsene naturally took up the operation of this instrument.

Since entering this country Mr. Olsene has played in many of the largest theatres and on many of the largest circuits. He was on the Pantages circuit for two years, and it was at the Pantages theatre in Tacoma that he secured the title of the "Victory Organist." This term was given to him in this way: Mr. Olsene was the first musician in this country to play the Victory march after the signing of the armistice. He had a personal friend, Lieut. Crowe, at Camp Lewis. Immediately upon receiving advance news of the signing of the armistice Lieut. Crowe communicated with Mr. Olsene, who at once "put on" the Victory march. In the morning papers he was termed the "Victory Organist" and this title has clung to him ever since.

Among other prominent theatres at which Mr. Olsene has played are the Strand, Tacoma; Butterfly, Minneapolis; Tivoli, New York, in addition to which there are many others.

In answer to the query "Why are you here?" Mr. Olsene replied: "Several months ago I was carrying on negotiations with Mr Pantages, Gore Bros., Lesser, and the T. D. & L. management. The T. D. & L. people made an excellent proposition in which the name of Glendale was mentioned, and I accepted on the spot. I find that the people of Glendale are far above the average along the musical line. They appreciate good music when they hear it and the better class of music finds a generous response in the hearts of the average Glendalian."

Mr. Olsene has been playing in Glendale six months, during which time he has made many friends. He receives letters every day requesting him to play some particular selection. To accommodate these friends Mr. Olsene has decided to make each Monday night "request night." Each Monday evening one requested selection will be played. He asks that those wishing certain selections played to kindly sign their names to their letters.

The local T. D. & L. theatre is one of a string of 25 showhouses in California, 12 of which are in the northern part of the state and 13 in the south. The mammoth Hope-Jones Wurlitzer organ that Mr. Olsene plays cost about $39,000 and is one of the finest on the coast. The Wurlitzer is his selection of all the organs built. In speaking of his success, Mr. Olsene claims it is the Wurlitzer that made him, which is just another way of showing how reluctant he is to "blow his own horn." In an article to appear soon, Mr. Olsene will tell about the manipulation of the Wurlitzer and the tone combinations possible by its use.

HIGH TRUSTEES ELECT TEACHERS

Select Several New Instructors for High School

The trustees of the Glendale high school held their regular meeting Tuesday night at the high school. The main business of the evening was the election of several new teachers. Miss Maybelle Taylor was elected for Spanish. Miss Taylor is splendidly prepared for her work, having been born in Brazil and learning the Portuguese language before she knew English. She spent the early part of her life in South America and has been back there a number of times so that she is thoroughly familiar with the language she is to teach. Miss Taylor taught in the Waco high school in Texas and in September at Dinuba, Calif., but had to give up on account of illness.

Miss Mary E. Creath was elected for a position in English. Miss Creath is a graduate of Iowa Wesleyan college and taught in Iowa for the last two years. Her work there was principal of the high school. Since coming to California she has put in a year and a half in a graduate course at U. of C. and is now going back to teach here.

Mrs. Alice Davies was elected for half day and evening school work in the commercial subjects. Mrs. Davies is now with the high school carrying full-time work as a substitute for Miss Switzer who is ill. As soon as Miss Switzer returns she will take up her new work. There will be another teacher elected for the position in English and history.

GREGG MISSES RED FLANNELS

A telegram has been received by C. E. Neale from his business partner, David L. Gregg, who started Sunday morning by airplane for San Francisco. The message stated that Mr. Gregg arrived safely in "Frisco," and that he was at that time making preparations for his trip into the "wilds" of Oregon and Washington.

Mr. Gregg expects to be away from Glendale about two weeks. He is making the trip for the purpose of "coming back" physically. He says that northern California is not as balmy as Glendale, and he is now regretting that he did not take Partner Neale's advice to take along his red flannels.

There is always a good deal of discussion about what is the best kind of bait to use, but a girl knows that powder and paint are the best bait for the poor fish.

Most people "eat them up" when compliments are offered, but they will never get really fat upon them—only puffed up.

KNIGHTS PYTHIAS PLAN HOME SITE

An enthusiastic meeting of the Knights of Pythias lodge was held in the hall, corner of Park avenue and Brand boulevard Tuesday night with Carl Nicholson presiding. The most important business to come up was the consideration of the report of the Pythias Home State committee, which is promoting the building of a home for aged Pythians and orphans. This committee has under advisement a number of sites for this home in different parts of the state. This home will require a site of not less than 100 acres. It must have access to gas, water and electricity and must be near a highway and transportation. The committee invited communities to submit sites, which it is believed would be desirable for this purpose. The chairman of this committee is Frank Merriam of Long Beach. This committee will meet again on March 15, when all propositions will be considered. The site selected will be presented to the grand lodge which will convene in May in Chico.

On Tuesday of last week Sam Brown, one of the oldest members of the Glendale lodge, celebrated his 66th birthday by treating the lodge to an oyster supper.

During the week of February 19 the Knights of Pythias lodge of Glendale will hold a celebration for the 59th anniversary of the Pythian lodge. The entertainment committee will make announcements concerning this celebration at a later date.

On Tuesday, February 7, the rank of Knight will be conferred on a large class by the local lodge.

On the same evening La Jolla temple will hold its regular meeting with the newly elected officers in charge.

There is no credit in the victory of a machine geared to sixty miles an hour over one geared to thirty, but if you can gear your thirty-mile machine to sixty and beat the other, you are worth while.

COLORED MINSTREL SHOW ARRIVES

The announcement that J. M. Busby's world's greatest colored minstrel will be at the Glendale theatre, will be hailed with delight by the lovers of ministrelsy. The fact that this is one of the oldest minstrel companies in the world is a guarantee of merit, and assures one that an evening of laughter and song is in store for them.

Many people remember the old time minstrel shows, perhaps at one time the most popular form of entertainment, and they will be pleased to learn that this season J. M. Busby's Minstrels have endeavored to inject some of the old time spirit in the performance, making a happy combination of the old time songs an ddances with the more up to date "jazz" numbers.

A street parade is given daily by this clever aggregation with a band concert in front of the the atre preceding the performance.

Flattery wins more suits than argument.

Back Weak and Lame for Years

Rub soreness, pain, stiffness right out with a small trial bottle of Old St. Jacobs Oil

St. Jacobs Oil stops any pain, so when your back is sore and lame, or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest St. Jacobs Oil at any drug store, pour a little in your hand, and rub it right on your aching back; and by the time you count fifty the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled. This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless, and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica, backache or rheumatism so promptly. It never disappoints!

CALLA LILY CO. IS NEW DAIRY

All of the dairy products will be handled in a sanitary manner and it will be the endeavor of the management to give the maximum service.

The owners of the Eagle Rock dairy wish to thank the public for their co-operation and patronage while that company was serving them and asks that this co-operation and patronage be extended to the new owners.

FIRE DEPARTMENT RESCUES KITTEN

Poor kitty! This morning a telephone call came in to the police department asking that a relief party be sent out to save the life of a cat that had been marooned on the top of a telephone pole since Tuesday morning. The lady who made the report said that the kitty was sitting on the cross arms of a pole between Lexington and Doran and Brand and Maryland, crying its life away. She said that she believed the kitty must be hungry, as it had been sitting at the peak of the pole since last Tuesday.

The fire department was notified of kitty's predicament and sent a detail with a long ladder to the rescue.

French Women Pooh-Pooh English Girl's Claim

Claire Sheridan, English sculptress, startled and shocked London society when she voiced the opinion that American men made the best husbands. Many women were ready with refutation.

The matter was put up to French women by a correspondent. Marriage was left out of the question, but here is what some of France's celebrated women answered to the question: "Who makes love best?"

Cleo de Merode, whose name at one time was linked with that of Leopold 1 of Belgium:

"Americans may appeal to the cold, reasoning sensibilites of an English woman, trained to repress her natural feelings, but no French women will agree with her.

"The Latin makes love best. All the great wooers of the world have been Latins—in blood if not in name. Conjure up but three names, Hugo, Maupassant and Napoleon. Has any American ever loved as these men loved?

Sizing Up a Man

"And, in our modern day, there still remains one man who understands love as love was understood a century ago—when it was art and before it became a science. I mean Gabriel d'Annunzio. Who has read Annunzio's works without feeling himself scorched with the ardent flame that lies beneath his genius?

"You want to know how a French woman sizes up a man? I will tell you. It is no secret, but it is sort of confession one of your own women—or one of the sensitive English women—could never bring herself to make.

"First, we take a swift look at the ensemble; we notice his dress. Not that our ideal must be neatly shod and correctly clothed, but the man who dresses carefully, who affects the flowing tie and the unkempt hair and the badly brushed trousers, must have a mentality to excuse his make-up. Otherwise, he is a fraud and a poseur and any woman with the courage of her instincts would spare him a second look.

"Next we—by a haphazard remark or two—sound him out to find whether he is fatuous or insipid, two qualities that mean falseness in the long run. A man soon reveals himself for what he is under the skillful lead of an experienced woman. What he does not say is often more important than what he does say, and instinct may be trusted to be a right-hand aid to observation and perception."

"Frenchmen Too Vain"

La Belle Otero, famed by her "Fifty years of being made love to by imbeciles of all nations leaves me still in doubt as to who makes love best.

"I have had small experience with Americans, but from what I do know of them I should certainly not partake the enthusiastic sentiments of Miss Claire Sheridan. However, one never knows. My experience has been that even the cold, Scotch-and-soda drinking Englishman can become wonderful.

"I can remember several sweethearts who at the time I believe to be the greatest sweethearts in the world. One was an Italian, one a Russian and one a Swede. I think of the three the Russian had a shade the best of it.

"Frenchmen make good sweethearts, but they are so vain. They think they have only to make eyes at a woman to have her at their feet. Italians are more sensible but at the same time more of a nuisance—they never will take no for an answer, but keep on until they nearly drive you out of your wits.

"Germans have never impressed me much. They classify women with their cows and pigs. A perfect wife to a German is a woman who will have a great many children and who will never burn the sauerkraut. Still, I once knew a Munich musician who talked like a phonographic record of one of Hugo's letters to his other wife. He spoiled it all one night by insisting on drinking beer at the Cafe de Paris."

American Accomplished Flirt

Mademoiselle Mistinguett, dancer and musical comedy actress:

"Who loves best? That depends.

"If you measure him by his assiduity, his accomplished manner, his savoir faire, then the Frenchman tops the list.

"If ardor is the prime essential, then the palm goes to the Italian.

"If consistency, fidelity and lasting tenderness are requisite, the Englishman has much to commend him.

"If tempestuous wooing, combined with humor and largeness of view are taken into account, the Irishman is the most lovable creature on earth.

"I once knew a man who had a French mother and an Irish father. He was my ideal. But—he never made love to me.

"The American man as a whole is the most accomplished flirt in the world, and knows better than anyone else how to say and do the little nothings so dear to a woman's heart, but he is not wonderful in love. Americans vaunt the fact that they place their women on a pedestal. Imagine loving a woman on a pedestal! As well declare yourself to a statue.

"What most Americans take for love is merely worship. And any woman would ten times sooner be loved than worshiped!"

Americans Lack Poetry

Mademoiselle Spindley, comedy favorite:

"American lovemaking is as cold as their language. When they dropped the second person singular out of everyday conversation they demonstrated that the practical side of affection outweighed with them the sentimental.

"There are poets in America, I believe, but to be poetical there is a sort of stigma. Every Frenchman in love is a poet."

La Belle Dorianne, Paris dancer:

"Americans are generous, affectionate, kind, considerate and faithful.

"I share Miss Sheridan's view. The American is the world's greatest admirer—but only when he wants to be. Moreover, 'American' is such a large term. His father and mother may have been French, German, Italian, English, Russian, Japanese, or Mexican.

"I am leaving shortly for America, where I expect to study the American psychology on the spot. But I have known many Americans. Many great Americans have been my closest, most intimate friends, and I can affirm that only in America is the real definition of love understood."

GLENDALE'S CO. M DEFEATS CRACK L. A. TEAM

Local Militiamen's Basket Ball Team Wins from Champions

The basketball team of Company M, 160th infantry, Glendale's own company, played the team from Company C, a Los Angeles company for the basketball championship of the regiment last night in Los Angeles and defeated the Los Angeles company by the one-sided score of 77 to 7. From the beginning of the game to the last whistle it was apparent that the Los Angeles team was far outclassed and had no chance of winning. By winning the game last night the Glendale team also won the regimental cup for basketball. Last week Glendale defeated the Los Angeles company in a game played in this city. It is rumored that a basketball team from the Long Beach company of the rgiment will challenge the team from Glendale for an early match.

The Glendale team was composed of Dennison and Price, forwards; Wilde, Tom McIver and W. McIver guards, and Jensen, center. Every member of the Glendale team played an excellent game, and the particular stars of the evening were Jensen and Price, who made most of the points for Glendale.

We note that a Chicago man murdered his wife because she was too extravagent.

We hold this is going altogether too far. Not for a minute would we indorse or countenance or approve such drastic methods, but we see no objection in every married man reading the item aloud to his wife as a warning.

HEAVY DUTY IS LATEST EXIDE BATTERY UNIT

Made for Machine Which Travels 10,000 Miles Yearly

The heavy duty Exide is the very latest thing to be turned out by the Electric Storage Battery company of Philadelphia. This battery is manufactured especially for the machine that travels 10,000 miles or more each year. It is a long-life, strong-kick battery which the manufacturers claim, is the most rugged and will stand the most service of any battery on the market today. This battery has undergone months and months of extensive tests and has been put to every service to which a battery could possibly be subjected. This stability results from an entirely new design in constructing. which is entirely original with the Exide people.

"Some battery manufacurers pride themselves in being the first on the market with some new idea," said the Glendale Exide agent at 113 West Harvard street, this morning. "The Exide people pride themselves on being last. They make sure after a series of thorough tests that the product they place on the market is as good as it can possibly be made. This method of thoroughly testing out their product before offering it for sale results in Exide users being saved thousands of dollars annually."

Foley's Friendly Fancies

JAMES W. FOLEY

THE HOST

The friends are gone who sat about the hearth,
The fire burns low and lower and still low,
And all the sparks have died, like the flown mirth
That echoed just a little while ago.

The friends are gone and only one still sits
In the wide circle of the empty chairs,
And sees the dying flame that glows and flits,
And hears the parting guests go down the stairs.

He sees the fire burn lower and still low,
The pale gray ghost of all it was before,
And he hears fainter footfalls as they go
And then the distant closing of a door.

Laughter and Song and Gladness and the rest,
Pain, Grief and Sorrow, Hope and dull Despair,
Each in the vacant circle was his guest,
And each has gone and left him musing there.

Each one has come and said him a good-night,
When all about the shadows growing dim,
The last spark crackled upward in its flight
And dead, cold embers left alone to him.

Till now the hearth is desolate and cold,
The shadows that once danced no longer play,
And gray the heaps of dusty ash that hold
The burned out embers of the bygone day.

Yet still he sits, and all alone with dreams,
That haply not for long yet may he keep,
Then the Gray Servant comes and sees and seems
To comfort him with quiet and with sleep.

The friends are gone, who sat with him the while,
Hope, Joy, Pain, Pleasure—each one was his guest,—
Now the Gray Servant sees, and with a smile
Lays him down tenderly to sleep and rest!

LASKY DIRECTOR SHOT TO DEATH

Police Have No Clue As to Who Was His Assassin

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 2.—William D. Taylor, prominent motion picture director, was found dead with a bullet through his back on the floor of his luxurious home on South Alvarado street today. He had apparently been murdered. The body was found by Harry Peazy, his servant.

Taylor was one of the leading directors of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation. He had been seated at his desk, going through a number of cancelled checks, when a bullet fired by some mysterious assailant ended his life, detectives said. The dead man apparently did not have a chance to defend himself. His revolver was found in a bureau drawer upstairs. Robbery was not the motive for the crime, as none of Taylor's valuables had been disturbed.

Police intimated that Edward F. Sands, whom they are seeking for robbery of Taylor's home on a former occasion, will be questioned in regard to the shooting as soon as he is taken into custody.

Mabel Normand, film comedienne, was in consultation with Taylor a few hours before he met his death, neighbors told detectives investigating the tragedy today. Taylor, accompanied Miss Normand to her machine, which was parked at the curb, witnesses said. Police believe that when Taylor accompanied Miss Normand to her machine, his murderer slipped into the house and hid.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McLean, motion picture stars, who live next door to Taylor, said they heard a shot fired at about 8:30 last night. Mrs. MacLean said she opened the door and saw a man leaving Taylor's residence. She could furnish no description of him. Mrs. C. F. Reddick, who lives across a court from the Taylor home, said she heard three shots fired at 2 a. m. today. Evidence could be found of only one bullet—the one that killed Taylor—having been fired in the room where the tragedy occurred, however. This bullet entered his left side immediately below the heart. Death was caused by a resultant hemorrhage.

Harry Peazy, the valet, sobbed as he told his story to newspapermen at the scene of the tragedy today.

"'Good night, Harry, good night,' Mr. Taylor said to me when I left him last night," Peazy said. "'Good night, Mr. Taylor,' I said, and that's the last I saw of him. I opened the door this morning and found his dead body, his feet stretching toward me, on the floor.

"I wish I could get the man that did it!" the negro cried passionately. "I'd go to jail for the rest of my life if I could get hold of him!"

Peazy said he came to Taylor's apartment early today, intending to go through the usual routine of his duties.

"I was going to fix his bath water for him," said the valet, "and then give him a dose of medicine. After that I was going to fix his breakfast—a couple of boiled eggs, some toast, and a glass of orange juice. When I opened the door I saw him lying there, stretched out on the floor, his feet toward me and the floor all bloody. I turned and screamed until people started running in.

"It's awful—it's just awful. Mr. Taylor was the wonderfulest man I ever worked for. I don't see how anybody would want to kill him. Everybody admired him so."

Kindness doesn't always beget kindness. Sometimes it just makes 'em think you're easy.

On the adjournment of that meeting the Women's Foreign Missionary society will have a session.

Leaves for Holland—Henry Michel, one of the leading home builders of Glendale, will leave Glendale February 25 for New York. En route he will stop at Salt Lake, Chicago, Washington, D. C., and other points. Mr. Michel has made reservations on the New Amsterdam liner which will leave for Holland on March 11. His reason for going to Holland is that he may pay a long-desired visit with his relatives and old friends living there. He expected to be away from Glendale about six months.

Moonshine's Work — Patrolman Anderson of the Glendale Merchants' Patrol telephoned the police department last night that he was holding a drunken man in South Glendale and asked that the police auto be sent for him. Detective Sergeant Delgardo answered the call and brought in G. Madina, a Mexican, who had looked too long on the wine while it was red or the moonshine while it was shining or something that gave him an awful kick. He was locked in firehouse No. 1 until this morning when he was taken before Judge Lowe in the police court and fined $15.

Tropico Presbyterians — The Men's club of the Tropico Presbyterian church will hold its regular monthly meeting in the Sunday school room of the school at 8 p. m. Friday, February 3. City Manager William H. Reeves will give the principal address of the evening on matters of local interest and all men of the community are invited to attend. Glyndon Smith, a clever sleight-of-hand artist of Los Angeles, will furnish entertainment. There will be some more of those good refreshments. Don't miss this. Come and bring some gentleman friend.

Mrs. Stecher's Party—A benefit card party will be held next Monday, February 6, at the home of Mrs. H. B. Stecher, 1305 South Glendale avenue. Bridge and 500 will be played and refreshments served. The purpose of the card party is to raise funds to buy more material to make additional quilts for the El Retiro home at San Fernando. They need fourteen more quilts out there, as well as hats, shoes and coats. If anyone has any pictures they would like to offer or anything that would cheer up these girls' bedrooms, they would certainly be appreciated.

Williams Will Stay.—Charles E. Williams of Marshall, Ill., who paid a visit of exploration to Glendale last December at the urging of his wife's sister, Mrs. R. M. Greenlaw, is back again. He went home, sold his interests in a large lumber and building business and is now in Glendale prepared to start in business of some kind as soon as an opportunity is offered. His wife and children will not come until school closes about the last of May. Mr. Williams is the kind of a busines sman Glendale wants and we feel sure he will be fairly in the harness when his family arrives. He says the trip out this time was somewhat exciting. The train was held for an hour at Flagstaff while the track was cleared of snow, and at many places in the mountains snow was much in evidence.

Mrs. A. H. Montgomery of 415 South Central avenue is confined to her bed on account of illness.

Mrs. C. A. Redmond of 331 West Harvard street, who has been ill at her home for several days, is much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Neel and children, Helen and Roy, who have been living at Santa Ana for the past few months, have returned to Glendale and are living in their home at 1337 South San Fernando road.

Mrs. C. R. Stuart and infant girl of Hollywood, who have been at the Glendale Research Hospital, went home this morning.

Mrs. Needham, mother of Mrs. Frank Ayars, 315 North Orange street, is confined to her home on account of illness.

Artists and saints used to be poverty-stricken, but artists nowadays have limousines and any first-class professional saint is able to employ a publicity agency.

TOL'ABLE DAVID MAKES BIG HIT

"Tol'able David" is truly one of the best pictures ever screened. Ralph Allan stated this fact also and backed up his opinion with the presentation of the picture at the T. D. & L. theatre yesterday. The story of "Tol'able David" is big in theme and simple humanness. If you haven't seen "Tol'able David" with Richard Barthelmess, star of "Broken Blossoms," "Way Down East" and other well known pictures—do so, as it is an exceptionally fine picture. It will be shown for the last times today.

Two comedies, "Why Adam Walked the Floor" and "One Stormy Night" brought down great bursts of laughter. George Olsene's song number, "Let's Waltz," with singing accompaniment, proved a decided hit and met instant popular approval.

Tomorrow and Saturday the regular week-end vaudeville will be the attraction.

RAIL STRIKE TIES UP GERMAN LINES

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—A great rail strike, spreading over the entire country was in effect on all German railway lines today. The walkout, which was timed for midnight last night, today was effective throughout Germany. The strikers have been orderly everywhere, according to reports. The Wirth government is preparing and organizing an emergency service.

One who shirks responsibility soon finds responsibility shirking him.

DOLBERG MAKES GIFT

Mr. Glen Dolberg, of the Dolberg Studio, generously gave the members of the Business and Professional Women's club a very pleasant surprise by accepting their invitation to visit headquarters Tuesday afternoon and presenting the organization with a leather-bound album containing the pictures of the majority of club members, as his personal gift. The artist established himself on West Broadway about the time the club was organized and proposed to it, as a courtesy and means of introducing himself to the business women, to take their pictures for such an album without charge, relying upon the extra prints he might make on their orders to reimburse himself. The club promptly accepted the offer but had not expected Mr. Dolberg to prvoide the album, too.

Perhaps the reason one who is about to commit suicide generally appears cheerful just before he does it, is because a condemned man always eats a hearty breakfast just before he is led to the gallows.

The something that you get for nothing is hardly ever worth much.

"Tol'able David"
with Richard Barthelmess
IS A TREMENDOUS PICTURE

A Personal Statement—

—the true lovable humanness of this story of a boy who wanted to be a man—
—the sweetness of appeal that is in the mother-love of this woman for her son—
—grips you with magnetic force and makes this one of the best pictures ever screened.

In my opinion, "TOL'ABLE DAVID" ranks with the greatest of pictures.
